Looking Back ...

The school year began September 3, 2003. As always, most of you were not quite ready for the transition from summer amusement into autumn academics. Many a nervous freshman could be seen wandering around the quad, desperately searching for the illusive "Bisc Hall," which most of you now know as the Biological Sciences Building.

Various job fairs, concerts, seminars, and colloquium filled the early months of the school year. The Ataris and Vendetta Red rocked the Ryan Center while the Theater department put on "Antigone," and "Into the Woods." Midnight Madness was revived and Ram Tours continued to keep you traveling. The tension of the World Series exploded with riots and arrests on campus. The Rams beat the PC Friars by just ten points in December, the first time the Friars had come to URI in 31 years. The PRO-FM "Jingle Mingle" brought Jessica Simpson, the Barenaked Ladies, and Maroon 5 to the Ryan Center during finals week. Before you knew it, Winter Break had arrived. Although abbreviated this year, it was still a welcome diversion from classes and exams.

January brought students back to a frigid welcome, with temperatures so low that classes were cancelled. Seniors started their final semester at URL, while freshmen breathed a sigh of relief upon completing their first. A now infamous Super Bowl stunt started the month of February, when Justin Timberlake ripped a portion of Janet Jackson's ensemble, exposing her breast. All the men on campus filled the union on Valentine's Day in the annual struggle to get a rose for their girl. Ram Tours celebrated March with a Spring Break trip to Ireland. April began the countdown to graduation. SEC held the annual Spring Fest, and the Union Board its famous Block Party. Mr. Belding dropped by, as well as Michelle Branch, Less than Jake, and Yellowcard. The Rainville Awards Banquet acknowledged some of our dedicated and successful students. Greek Week was fun for those involved, and bewildering for those who weren't. The 6th annual Hempfest demonstrated the urgency of drug policy reform and drew a record size crowd to the quad. May began with a URI favorite tradition, Oozeball. Playing in the mud was much better than studying for finals on a sunny day. After finals, underclassmen departed while seniors stuck around to enjoy their last days at URI. On May 23rd, the seniors said farewell with tears in their eyes and smiles on their faces at the 118th Commencement Exercises. Seniors recollected four years of laughter and tears while waiting for their diplomas. The Renaissance Yearbook staff hopes they will recollect those same memories and many others as they thumb through the pages of this book, the 102nd edition of the Renaissance Yearbook.

Homecoming

October 11, 2003

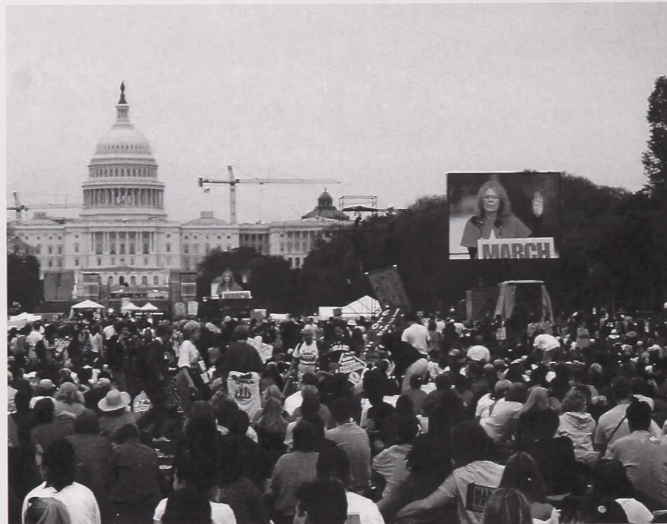

Spectators of all ages came out on Saturday to watch the University of Rhode Island battle Villanova at Meade Stadium in the annual homecoming football game. Energy was pumping through the crowd as generations of URI alumni and students came together to cheer on the Rams. Old and young faces were mixed, all sporting the school colors. URI alumni said they come back year after year, looking forward to participating in the school events. Larry and Marylou Roche say the atmosphere had definitely improved since then attended URI in the 1950's. "Back then there were only about 1,800 to 2,000 students. The football team was good then but there are definitely more people here," Larry said. Marylou said they try to attend every game. "It's so much fun. This is great!" she said. Domingo Morel graduated from URI in 1998. When asked why he came back for the game he responded, "I'm a football fan so I try to come to all the games. They're [the team] looking pretty good. They're better than the year I was here." But the game doesn't just attract those who have left URI behind. Current students also came out to join the fun. Sarah Mowesky, a sophomore majoring in communications, said she loves coming out to support her team. "It's always so much fun. Win or lose, it's a good time. You get to hang out with your friends and just enjoy the day," she said. At halftime, everyone watched as Scott Zide and Allison Vuona were crowned Homecoming King and Queen. Shouts and applause were heard around the stadium as the two stood before the crowd to accept their titles.

March For Women's Lives

"The longest march begins with a single step"

~ Ghandi

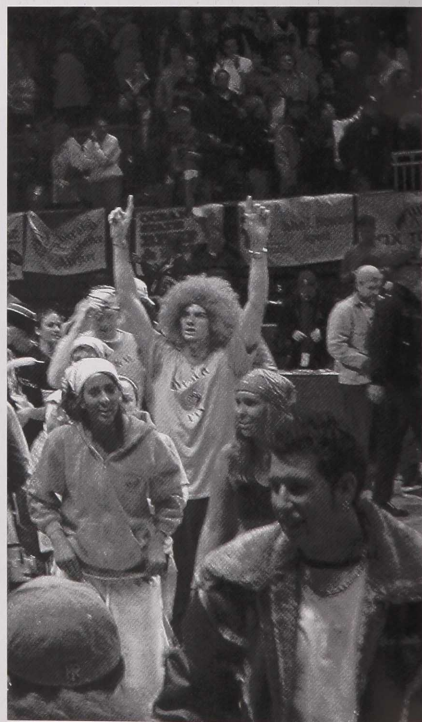

Among an estimated 1.2 million people, 100 University of Rhode Island students participated in Sunday's March for Women's Lives in Washington D.C. to support women's reproductive rights, with a focus on the right to choose to have an abortion. The student organization Promoting Awareness of Gender Equality (PAGE) planned the trip. "It was just incredible to see so many people," said Heather Kumer, president of the group. "It was definitely a climax in my life," Kumer said. "It made me realize that I am not alone." The crowd marched with signs reading "Against Abortion? Don't Have One," "Women's Health Not Corporate Wealth," "Bush out of my Bush" and "My Body is not Public Property." One sign said, "77 percent of anti-abortion leaders are men. 100 percent of them will never be pregnant." Ryan Freebern, 24, of Kingston, was among the minority of men at the march. "I believe that women's rights have come a long way, that there's still a long way to go. I feel that women should have the right to choose," he said. URI senior Sarah Freebern agreed. "Right now it seems more critical because of the behavior of the Bush administration that we change things before they get a lot worse," she said. There were many speakers at both the morning and afternoon rally held at the National Mall, including politicians, organization leaders and actresses. Senator Hillary Clinton told the crowd, "Thank you for marching for our rights...for women's lives." However, marching is not enough to change the direction our country is headed under this administration, she said. Reproductive justice means have the right to choose to have an abortion or bear a child, said Gwedolyn Mink, professor of Women's Studies at Smith College.

With the stars aligned on Saturday and every oddity occurring on cue, the bizzaro University of Rhode Island men's basketball team pulled a 180-degree turn at a crucial point in its early season, upsetting Providence College, 89-79. The Friars (3-1) made their first trip to Kingston in 31 years in the middle of a blizzard, but it didn't deter a crowd of 7,657 from trekking through the snow. And as if the setting wasn't strange enough, URI assaulted PC with a barrage of three-pointers, far from the Rams' strong point. In fact, the Rams (5-2) had only made 15 shots from behind the arc in 80 attempts this year, struggling terribly in recent contests at Syracuse and Brown. They responded though in their first home game in two weeks with 10 threes in 14 attempts, a school-record 71 percent. Rhody guard Dustin Hellenga (26 points, six assists, five rebounds and four steals), who had made just 3 of 20 three pointers in the last two games, hit 5 of 9 on Saturday, including a bomb from near half court with the shot clock running down. The shot sparked an 11-3 URI run that broke the game open in the second half. "They know what they did. They know the stats. They hear it from people," URI coach Jim Baron said of his players past deficiencies. "[But] you have to take shots to make them. We stepped up and made them. That rim looked really wide. I kept saying to my assistant, 'Is this the same team that played against Syracuse and Brown.'" "They made the key shots from the perimeter, from downtown against our zone," Friar coach Tim Welsh said. "When that happens it becomes very hard to contain a team with all those athletes. Their weakness became strength today." PC held a 58-57 lead after a pair of free throws from Rob Sanders (13 points, four rebounds and five assists) with 10:17 left. The Rams couldn't get a good look on the following possession and Hellenga, after taking a pass near half court, thought the shot clock was about to run out and fired away. Eight seconds remained on the clock, but luck, which was on URI's side on Saturday, guided the shot through the net. "Jimmy sits on the right side of Our Lady of Mercy and I sit on the wrong side, so I'm going to sit behind him in church tomorrow," Welsh said. "Hellenga makes one when he's closer to half court than the top of the key, [Terrance] Mack banks one in and [Brian] Woodward makes one falling out of bounds. I know we almost have to play perfect to win." The momentum swing swept through the Ryan Center like an avalanche after Hellenga's shot. Three pointers from Woodward (19 points) and Dawan Robinson (26 points, six assists and five rebounds) extended URI's lead to 69-62. Chris Holm, who had an uncharacteristic soft touch, made all three of his shots, including a bucket to put the Rams up 73-67. Holm and Mack combined to add 14 points and nine rebounds off the bench. PC's last chances to get back in the game slipped through the hands of big man Tuuka Kotti. He missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with just under three minutes left, then lost a pass on the right wing with 2:03 left. Hellenga sealed the win for URI, stealing a pass in the backcourt and bringing it down for a lay up. He waved his arms like a conductor as the crowd responded like his symphony with a roar. "Nobody has a bigger heart and a bigger fire to win and to compete. He puts it all out there," Baron said. "I love when guys are animated. I try to get everybody around me to be animated. I try to get my wife to be animated." The improved shooting performance allowed URI to crack a zone defense after failing to do so against the Orangemen and the Bears. The Rams totaled 33 turnovers and 20 assists against those two 2-3 zones, but were finally able to distribute the ball on Saturday. URI had 21 assists in the game compared to just 12 turnovers. Point guard Dawan Robinson most notably increased his care of the ball, adding six assists and only two turnovers after having 26 turnovers in the first six games. "From Brown to this game I thought we got a lot better because we turned the ball over too many times against Brown. I thought we shared the basketball so much more than we've done in the past," Baron said. "I thought Dawan played as well as he's ever played. He played yeoman today. With handling the basketball, with getting six assists and limiting his turnovers, he was very productive." The win was the second straight for URI in its series with PC and also its second straight upset over the Friars. PC had received votes in both national polls last week, but were not listed in either poll this week. "This was a great victory for us," Baron said. "We played as well as we've played since I've been here. It just really came together."

Vagina Monologues

A play that will make you laugh and cry, both hilarious and poignant, the Vagina Monologues is coming to the University of Rhode Island. Based on Eve Ensler's interviews with over 200 women, the Vagina Monologues is now a worldwide social and activist movement. Starting out off-Broadway, the play received rave reviews. The Monologues have since been made into an HBO documentary, a book and have been performed at colleges and communities around the world. Always held around Valentine's Day, V-Day stands for Victory, Valentine and Vagina. It now represents Vote as well, part of a new campaign, Women Elect the Future. "When all women live in safety, no longer fearing violence or the threat of violence, then V-Day will be known as Victory Over Violence Day," according to <http://www.v-day.org>. Launched in 1998, V-Day exists solely to prevent violence against women. All proceeds go to the Violence Against Women Prevention Program. Darcie Blanding, V-Day organizer and peer advocate, has coordinated the event for the past two years. "I just think it's an amazing opportunity for women to get together," she said. The Vagina Monologues are not exclusively for women. Men are welcomed and are encouraged to attend. There are 28 cast members in the Vagina Monologues. They are all URI students, except for the coordinator of violence against women. Their majors range from human development and family studies to music education, textiles and fashion merchandising to political science. "It's a great bunch of women that come together and talk about vaginas," Schenk said. "It makes you think how lucky we are to be in this country, how much freedom we have," she added.

While you may have benefited from a concert or dance run by a student organization, been comforted by an Resident Assistant or welcomed into the University of Rhode Island community by a orientation leader, you may not have realized how much work these fellow students put into making life at URI more enjoyable. The best and the brightest of the URI student body gathered in the Memorial Union Ballroom last night to honor those individuals and organizations dedicated to leadership and service with the 2004 Rainville Leadership Awards. President Robert L. Carothers kicked off the celebration by listing some of the qualities of an effective leader. "The chief characteristic of an effective leader is to listen aggressively to the people they serve," Carothers said. "I hope all of you have begun to learn these lessons, and you wouldn't be here tonight if you didn't." Robert Kubica, Rachel Poirier and Kirsten Olson received the Student Leadership Award out of, nine nominees, an unusually high number. "I honestly think the three of us should split our awards into three parts and then all nine of us can get awards," Poirier said after the ceremony. Douglas Reed was the recipient of the Student Worker Award for his work at the Cancer Prevention Research Center as a senior interviewer. He has also worked as an orientation leader and peer mentor at University College. "We're all winners. I truly feel that way," Reed said of his fellow finalists, Carrie Chandonnait, Matthew Harrington, Rosanna Lalli and Bethany Toole. The Adams and Browning Hall Staff, made up of all first time RAs as well as a new Residence Hall Director and Graduate Hall Director, won the award for Team Excellence. The Rainville Awards are in honor of A. Robert Rainville, who served as the Vice President for Student Affairs from 1980 until his death in 1986.

The Fashion Merchandising Society (FMS) brought the annual fashion show, which was introduced by the Dreams of Diversity Through Dance performance, to the University of Rhode Island last night in the Memorial Union ballroom. There weren't many free seats for the show that featured many different clothing styles from about 20 different designers, all students at URI. Jenna Casey said her inspirations were the 1950's and the fashion of the time. "People don't dress up anymore. I like to dress up," Casey said, adding that she is one for the girly designs that focus nicely on cocktail dresses and formal party clothes. "I like bright colors," said Danielle Tassone, another student designer. Her inspirations were Sex and the City and sexy, colorful clothes. Tracy Freedman was going for the old Hollywood/old New York look with a modern twist. She focused more on the accessories, such as hairnets, and the fur that went along with the 1920 to 1940's style bathing suit bottoms. The Vice President of FMS, Lori Trink, was one of the designers and said that her number one goal when designing clothes is shock value. Her vampire driven line was meant to blow the minds of the audience and to force them to think differently. Trink picked vampires this year because they are, "intriguing and fun and execute a horror experience for the audience." Trink is also the head of the fund raising committee and said that most of the money for the show came from fun raisers throughout the year at Valentine's Day and Easter. Trink said that not only did the fund raising get money they needed but also promoted FMS so that they could be recognized for the group they are. Trink thinks that it is a great group for Textile, Fashion Merchandising and Design majors as well as anyone who is interested in art.

Hempfest

"It's a beautiful day with good vibes," Chad Anderson, a sophomore at the University of Rhode Island and a member of Students for Sensible Drug Policy (SSDP), said on Saturday in regards to URI's annual Hempfest. SSDP organized Hempfest, which took place from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. on the quadrangle and brought in an estimated 1,000 to 2,000 people. Anderson said music was the largest attraction at Hempfest and the band Zox drew the biggest crowd. "I've been enjoying the music," Tina Bowes, a freshman said. The event, which was open to the URI student body as well as the local community, provided people with free entertainment from local bands, and vendors who sold food, hemp jewelry and clothing. Mark Blanchette, a vendor for the Wormtown Trading Company has been coming to Hempfest since 1997. He described the enthusiasm and turnout of URI's Hempfest to be much better than many other universities. "For college events this is put together well," he said. "They do a better job here than in other schools." The array of activism allowed some people to appreciate more than just music and shopping. "Hempfest sounded cool when I was asked to come here," Dane Putman, a resident of Ashaway, R.I. said. "I like what it stands for and I would definitely help its causes out. I think it should come back here every six months." SSDP used the event as an opportunity to educate the public about issues they promote. "Hempfest is basically here for people to have a good time, see a good show and look at information about the failures of the drug war," said Chris Tschirley a senior at URI and the treasurer of SSDP. "We want to spread education."

The days are getting longer, the weather is slowly getting nicer and Oozeball, sponsored by the Student Alumni Association, one of URI's most enjoyable events is right around the corner. For those of you who have not heard of Oozeball, or even worse, those of you who have never played before, listen up! Oozeball is a mud-volleyball tournament that over 1,000 students attend each year. You are guaranteed at least two games, a fabulous Oozeball t-shirt and more fun than you have ever had in your entire life. If you have never experienced being tackled in the mud, now is your chance. In addition to a day of fun filled games, there are mud-related contests for your enjoyment. Get excited for this event and remember:

The 2003 Men's Soccer Season got off to a great start with assistant coach Jay Primiano being named a 2003 AFLAC National Assistant Coach of the Year. Primiano was among 500 assistant coaches chosen from 300,000 nominations from across the country. The URI team continued to be honored throughout the season, including forward Perek Bellah as Atlantic-IO Player of the week. Bellah scored two of URI's goals including the game-winning penalty kick in URI's first victory of the year, a shutout against Northeastern.

The team's season was full of tightly contested games, including three that went into double overtime. The first of these was a loss to Oregon State, followed by a draw against Richmond. The Rams continued to build steam, and the final double overtime match ended with a triumph against St. Joseph's. This win kicked off an end of the season winning streak that carried the Rams into a 3-0 shutout against the University of Massachusetts in their Senior game. That win earned URI a bid to the A-IO Championships.

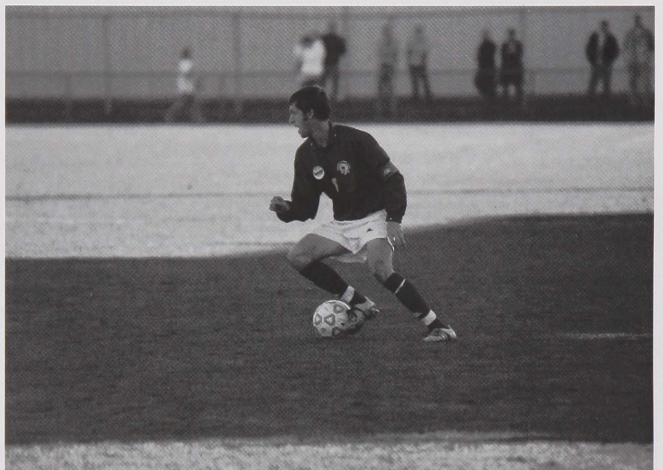

The winning streak continued through the Championships, including a shutout against Richmond, who had forced URI to accept a draw earlier in the season. URI clinched the Atlantic-IO Championships with a win against Temple and moved on to the NCAA Championships. Perek Belleh and Conor Lander were invaluable to the Rams' season, and both were named to the 2003 Atlantic-IO Men's Soccer Second-Team. Unfortunately, the winning streak ended with the Rams falling in the first round of the NCAA Championships to Connecticut.

With a new coach at the helm-Lisa Cole, the former assistant from the University of Connecticut-URI's Women's Soccer team got off to a great start with two 4-0 victories for the season opener. Hindered with some key injuries and learning a new style of soccer tested the team in the middle part of the season. However, through hard work and leadership, particularly from the senior class, the team earned a trip back to the Atlantic-IO Tournament, as well as a reputation for playing a good brand of soccer and boasting some very talented players. The season finished with an 8-8-2 regular season record. Erica Young was named Atlantic-IO Player-of-the-Week for her outstanding performance in important conference victories.

The University of Rhode Island Women's Volleyball Team came into the 2003 fall campaign with several changes and renewed hope from the previous season. As always, the goal of winning the conference championship loomed large. Several events hindered the achievement of the conference crown, but URI had many memorable moments throughout the season. Eight new players were added to the roster with the hopes of adding much needed depth to the program. The biggest obstacle was to mesh new players and old into one unit in only a few weeks of training.

The first weekend of the year, the Rams headed to the Sea-Sun Invitational in Orono, Maine to take on #11 Penn State, Colorado, Southeast Missouri, and Maine. URI played #11 Penn State in the first match of the season. The Rams battled hard before losing in 3 games. Up next was Maine. The Rams won 2 of the first 3 games before falling in 5 in a very tough environment. The next morning URI played Colorado. The Rams warmed up slowly losing the first 2 games but put a scare into the buffaloes losing 30-32 in game 3. URI got some redemption for playing hard all weekend by beating Southeastern Missouri in 4 games to get the first win of the season.

Conference play started in the Bronx the last weekend in September with the Rams beating Fordham in a grueling 5 game match. The next weekend, the Rams traveled to Duquesne and defeated the Dukes in another 5 game thriller. Saturday night in Washington D.C., URI made another attempt for an early conference road win. After winning the first 2 games, the outlook was good, however, George Washington refused to fall at home and won 15-12 in a third straight 5 game match for the Rams.

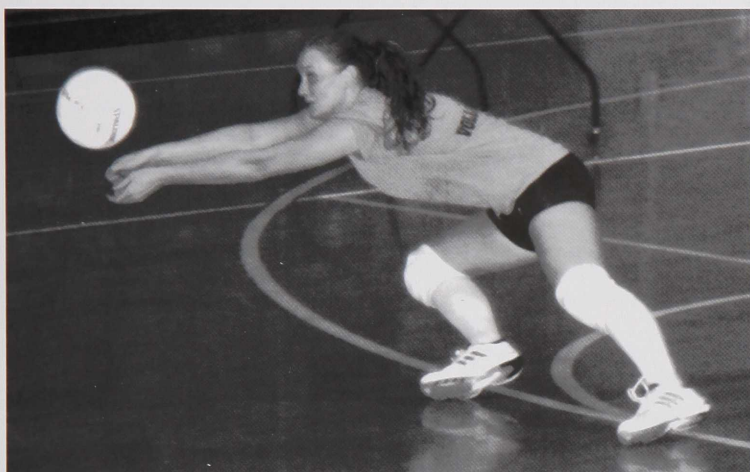

On homecoming night, the Rams bounced struggling LaSalle in 3 games. The next weekend, URI hosted conference champion Dayton and Xavier. Dayton survived in 3 close games with a few Ram miscues leading to the loss. Xavier was not so fortunate. The Rams came out aggressive from the start and beat Xavier handily in 3 games leaving the Rams 14-3 in 4th place in the Atlantic-10 standings half way through the season.

With only 1 conference match the next weekend, The Rams hosted #14 Notre Dame on Thursday night. The Rams held their own against the #1 blocking team in the nation before falling in 3 games. After only 6 months of rehab, Kaleena Miller came back into the starting lineup as an outside hitter against Fordham and instantly sparked the Rams. With an unparalleled sense of self-confidence, the Rams won in 3 straight games (30-21, 30-20, 30-15).

With the last home weekend upon the Rams, URI hosted George Washington and Duquesne. After letting a win slip away in D.C., the Rams made sure to close the deal at home against GW. The Rams left no doubts in a resounding 3-0 win. However, the Rams a let their guard down and Duquesne snuck in a grabbed a 3-0 victory in very tight match with URI holding two game points in game 1.

URI faced a tough final weekend at Xavier and Dayton. Xavier won several tough matches and needed a win against URI to stay alive for the A-IO championship. After splitting the first 2 games, the Rams fell to Xavier in 4 very close games. Now with URI needing to win at Dayton to stay alive, sheer determination helped the Rams raise their level of play. The Rams controlled game 1 and won 30-26. The Rams started game 2 with flawless volleyball and held the flyers at bay until the last third of the game. With URI up 21-16, the conference champion flyers strung together several blocks and took the momentum from the Rams. After fighting hard, the Rams fell in game 2, 30-26. Dayton took the last 2 games with the most potent offense in the conference finally clicking. It was an extremely tough loss for the Rams, who were scheduled to host the A-IO Championships, as URI was eliminated from championship competition. The Rams 7-7 conference record left them 5th overall.

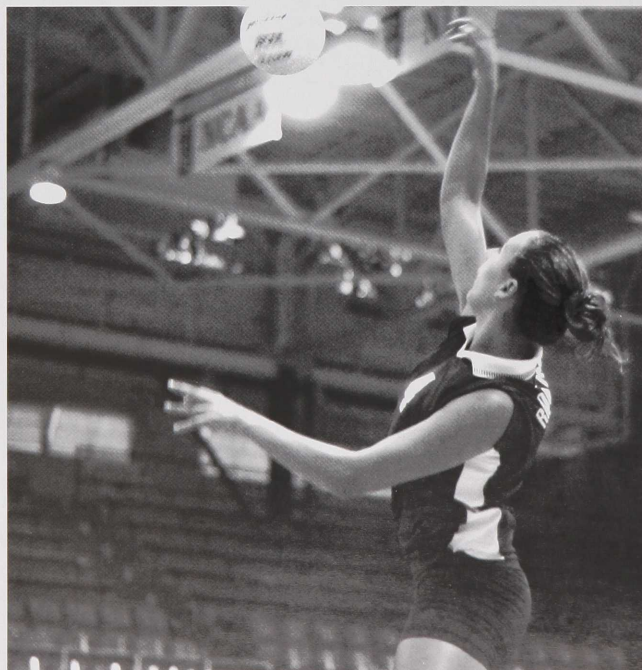

Even though the Rams did not get the opportunity to host the A-IO championships, there was a sense of achievement for the program. The program integrated 8 new players into the program and the team responded well. Two-thirds of the starting lineup was completely different from last year including the pivotal setter position. Six of the new players were true freshmen that had never played collegiate volleyball and several players had injuries that they overcame just to practice everyday. With these challenges, each weekend through the end of the season the squad played better volleyball than the last. Bob Schneck stated 'I feel that this was one of our strongest jobs of coaching in all of my years here at URI'. Ultimately, the progress made this year will lead to more wins next season. - Greg Goral, Assistant Women's Volleyball Coach

Over the 2003 Season, Rhody Football was an offensive force to be reckoned with. The URI attack averaged 416 yards per game, ranking 17th in the country in total offense. In rushing offense, URI was ranked second in the country and first in the A-10, with an average of 334.1 yards per game. Further, the Rams set a new all time A-10 rushing record with 4,005 total yards throughout the season. A great help to URI rushing was Wendall Williams who was named A-10 Special Teams Player of the Year. Williams was first in the A-10 for all-purpose yards per game with an average of 163.7 yards.

This offense won URI the third Governor's Cup victory in a row for URI. The Governor's Cup culminated a Rhody three game-winning streak early in the 2003 season. Helping create this streak were Edgar Puzio, named 3rd team all conference, and Jim Patrick who was named to the CoSida District I All-Academic All-American Team. URI defeated rivals Brown with a score of 27 to 9.

The next weekend was the Homecoming match against Villanova. In a tight back and forth fight, URI took the lead in the third quarter with a 38-yard field goal by 1st team all-conference place-kicker Shane Laisle, who was the most accurate kicker in the A-10, scoring 75% of his field goals. The fourth quarter was highlighted by a 95-yard run by Williams. URI forced five interceptions from Villanova's quarterback in that game as well. Unfortunately, Villanova entered the endzone with a one-yard sneak in the final 20 seconds of the game and pulled ahead with a final score of 21 to 17.

BASKETBALL

The URI Men's Basketball season opener was sign of greatness to come. The Rams led by as many as 26 points in their 89-77 triumph over Northeastern. The Rams added two more wins during the Las Vegas Tournament before heading to face defending National Champions Syracuse. The Rams were leading by 11 points in the first half, and they won the game in rebounds 55-41. However, URI's low 3-point completion percentage allowed Syracuse to scrape by 69-65. The Rams returned to defeat Brown and face Providence College at home with the support of a sell out crowd, in the middle of a blizzard, no less. Following the philosophy of "Not in our house," Rhody left no doubt as to who was the state champion, blowing past Providence 89-79. This achievement fueled five more wins in a row to total an impressive seven game winning streak.

This streak was tarnished by a trip to Seton Hall in which URI was tied 24-24 in the first half but could not hold on for a victory. Rhody bounced back with a defeat of Fordham at the Atlantic 10 conference opener. After this success, URI hit a rough patch in their season, but the team picked up steam with a three game win streak heading into their second meeting with an undefeated and No. 2 nationally ranked St. Joe's. The St. Joe's game was a nail-biting, edge-of-your-seat experience for a blue sea of fanatical fans which left the Rams up at halftime. The last ten minutes of the game were a back and forth battle with both teams always within three points of each other. URI pulled ahead by two with no more than a minute to go, but in the end, St. Joe's squeezed by and barely managed to keep their undefeated record intact. URI's next big challenge was the Atlantic 10 tournament, where it boasted a first round win before being knocked out in the quarterfinals by George Washington. The Rams were honored to host the first round NIT game in which they soundly crushed Boston University. The season ended with a second round NIT loss to West Virginia.

WOMENS BASKETBALL

The Women's Basketball season was an in-conference success with a .500 record for only the second time since 1996. The Rams got off to a spectacular start with a 25 point win against Northeastern in the first home game of the season. Rhody went on to win the Newport Harbor Hotel & Marina Holiday Classic with victories over both William & Mary and St. John's.

Rhody went on to face both in-state rivals, starting with Brown University. URI forced 29 turnovers for Brown and held the lead the majority of the second half, starting with a three pointer by Yolett McPhee. In the next in-state match-up, URI trailed Providence College in the final minutes of the game. Denise King responded with 14 straight points that tied the score at 66-66 heading into overtime. The Rams pulled ahead in overtime, and thanks to King's season-high 28 point game, URI won the title of state champions.

The next big match-up for URI was the Atlantic 10 season opener against St. Bonaventure. Rhody dominated this match, thanks to a season-high 22 point game by Shayla Johnson. In conference, URI went on to knock off both the number one and number two seeded teams. First, the Rams faced Atlantic 10 leader Temple in a game which URI lead the entire second half. Despite this lead, the game was still nerve-racking and came down to a missed three point shot by Temple at the buzzer. URI went on to face Atlantic 10 second place team St. Joe's in which they forced 21 turnovers and led in the game's final ten minutes. Later in the season, URI faced the new first place Atlantic 10 team George Washington in a rematch of last year's Atlantic 10 Championship. URI led at half time, but the lead switched hands repeatedly in this closely matched battle until the Rams fell behind in the last five minutes.

In the Atlantic 10 Championships, URI won their first game against Dayton but fell to Richmond in the next round. The season would not have been possible without the team's seniors, including Third-Team All-Atlantic 10 player Denise King. She accumulated the twelfth highest career score in URI history with 1,023 points. Also invaluable was Shayla Johnson, who was named to the Atlantic 10 All-Defensive Team.

Our Lovely Daughter
Denise Michelle King
"Stinky"

Denise

As a young child we observed you being helpful, independent, creative, loving and a compassionate person.

As a baby you were and still are beautiful.

In elementary school you tested in the Gifted and Talented Program. You played oboe in the school band. With all of this you played three sports--soccer, softball and basketball--and were selected as student of the week.

In Middle School you carried a straight A average in all subjects. You were inducted into the Honor Society. You also became an excellent speaker in the community, school and church.

During high school you were Council for Student Government (CSG) President of the Senior Class. You had been Vice President in your junior year. You were inducted into the National Honor Society and Honors Band. You were Captain of the Varsity Basketball Team, Peer Helper and Peer Minister--just to name a few.

While at the University of Rhode Island you were inducted into the National Honor Society, made the Dean's List, represented URI at the NCAA Conference and were Captain of the Women's Basketball Team (among other accomplishments).

We are very proud of you not just because of the things you've done, but the person you have been. You have learned a lot these last four years about life and how to cope with different situations with your head held high. We know that you are a strong young woman. We, your family, wish you much happiness and success in all you do in life. You have brought joy into our lives. God has truly Blessed you and kept you in His care

LOVE YOU ALWAYS!

*Our dearest Daughter Jessica;
When a parent looks through a daughter's eyes, the stars seem to shine with endless possibilities and the earth sings with hope. Dad and I saw these possibilities in you and you made them all happen.*

Congratulations on your graduation and you have all our prayers for your future endeavors. What a wonder and beautiful gift you are to us. You have made us both very proud. Thank you.

*Your success is not a matter of idle chance, it's a matter of making the right choices.
It's not something you wait for, but rather something you'll achieve with effort.*

Things won't turn up in this world until you turn them up. Success is neither magical nor mysterious. The people that truly succeed in the world are the people who look for the circumstances they want, and, if they can't find them, make them.

*Don't sit on the sidelines; get in the game. Your access to success has no real limits.
The great opportunity in your life is where you are right now.*

Every situation, properly perceived, becomes an opportunity for you. You have grand opportunities all around you.

*Open your eyes, and you will find it. If you have the desire, you have the power.
Taking action is all that is required.*

We're very proud of you for who you are and for your accomplishments. Put on your wings and fly into life with everything you have. You will realize success and happiness.

Love,

Mom, Dad and Libby (and your extended family) Christine E. Gardine

Dear 'Fel'

*We said a graduation prayer especially for you and asked the Lord to bless you with success in all you do. We prayed that He would guide you so your plans fall into place and bring you strength and courage for the challenges you'll face. Most of all, we prayed that this would be the start of reaching for the dreams that are closest to your heart!
We love you dearly and are so proud of all of your accomplishments throughout the years...
thanks for all the memories! Congratulations!*

Dear Jen:

It seems only fitting to have your first day of nursery picture in your college yearbook as a symbol of new beginnings.

Nursery school was the beginning of your academic life, and now you're beginning your adult life.

We are so very proud of you and everything you've accomplished. We love you for everything you are and will be. You're my brown-eyed girl. Do you remember when we used to sing Sha la la la la la la la la la de da?

Dear Rudy:

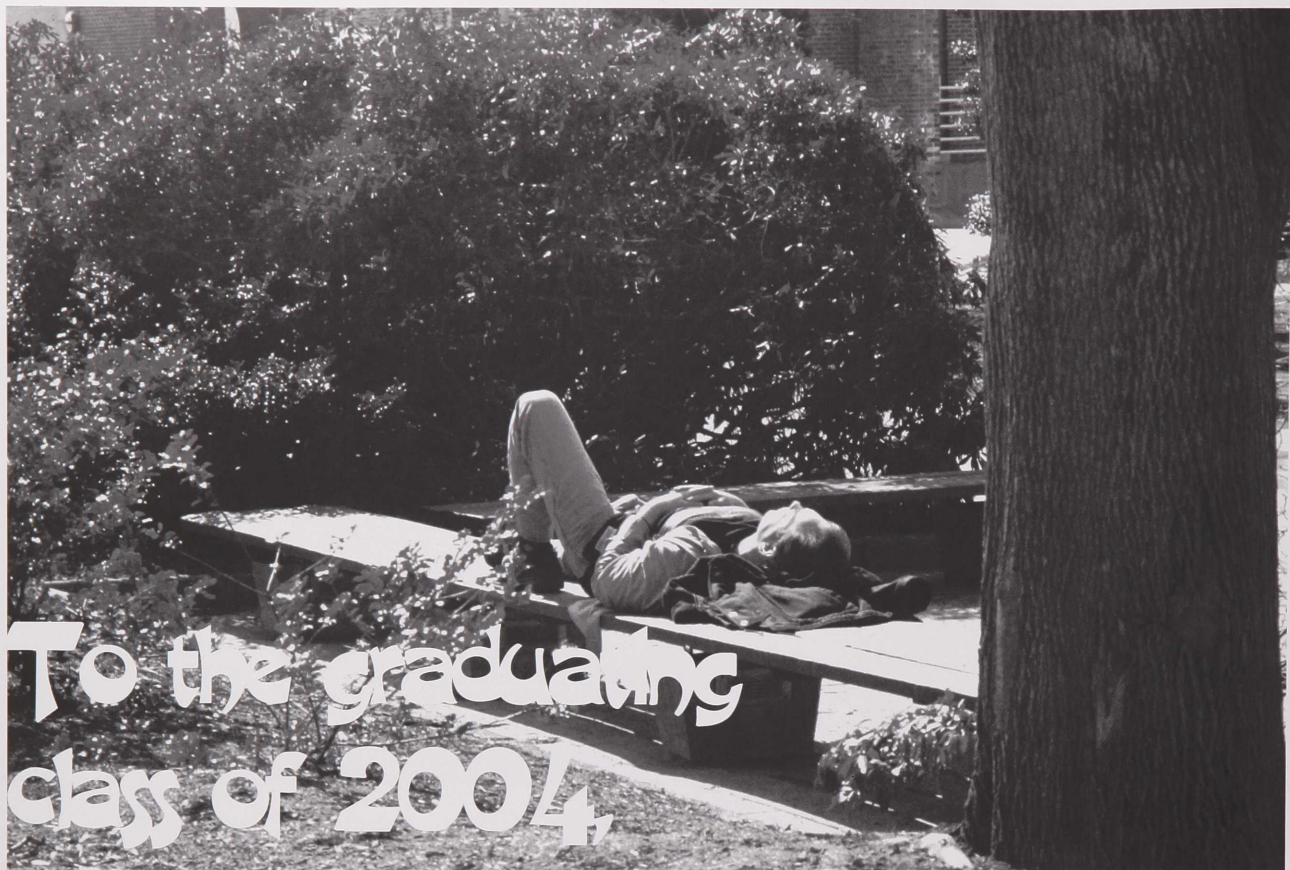

I took this picture of you and Mom at the Bronx Zoo in New York in 1983. It seems like yesterday! Over the years, we've watched you grow from this little boy to the young man that will soon graduate from U.R.I.

Mom, Elisa, Theresa and I are so very proud of you. We love you and wish you a smooth transition to the next phase of your life. We'll all be there for you!

Rudy, we love you now and forever.

Beginning before school even starts, the Renaissance staff begins work on the yearbook for the upcoming graduating class. We recruit underclassmen to help us gather all the photos we need. We take pictures of every imaginable event that takes place on campus. This volunteer organization spends many, many hours in the office attempting to create this lasting memory for the graduates. Although it only encompasses the time span of one academic year, we hope it will stir up many memories for you.

Years from now, as you review this book, we hope you will remember the good times you had here. We hope you remember the many friends you made, the many laughs you had, and even the tears. We hope you remember that one teacher who changed your life, and even the one you wished you never met.

If in twenty years from now, you can look back at this book and remember events
and friends long forgotten, then we have succeeded in creating a chronicle of your time spent here at the University of Rhode Island

We wish you all the best of luck in the future

Colophon

The 2004 Renaissance Yearbook, Volume 102, was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing in State College, PA. Our representative was Norval E. Garnett and our plant consultant was Yvette Freeman. The 2004 Renaissance consisted of 224 pages and had a press run of 285 copies. The office of the Renaissance Yearbook is located in Room 123 of the Memorial Union, 50 Lower College Rd, Kingston, RI 02881. The phone number is (401) 874-5897. The e-mail address is yearbook@etal.uri.edu.

The staff of the 2004 Renaissance Yearbook would like to thank the following people for their outstanding help and support in the daunting endeavor of creating the year's edition: Maureen McDermott, Tom Dougan, Ron Barlow, Dave Bascom, Brad Irish, and the Alumni Association, as well as Norval Garnett, Carin Orlick Korin, Nick Murgio, Joy Hess, the URI Theater Department, and the Greek community for their unwavering support and for donating pictures to be used in this book. We also thank the Dean's offices of the University's ten colleges, Sports Media Relations, and all those people we inevitably forgot to mention but never forget to appreciate.

Design

All pages were created on a Dell desktop PC running Windows 2000. Adobe Pagemaker v.6.5 and Jostens Yeartech v.2004 were used for page design. Visioneer PaperPort and Adobe Photoshop LE were used for creation and manipulation of digital images. The cover is Process Color. The endsheets are Slate. Paper stock is 80 pound gloss. Binding is Smyth sewn. Omni proofs were used for corrections.

Typography

Typeset Clarence and Speaking Style were used throughout the book. Base ink color was black.

Photography

Sports section photographs were courtesy of Nick Murgio and Media Relations. All other photographs were taken by the Renaissance staff and helpful members of the URI student body. Senior portraits, Graduation, Block Party, and some candid pictures were taken by DaVor Photography, 654 Street Road, PO Box 8507, Bensalem PA 19020. Staff photographs were developed and printed by DaVor Photography.

Color

Pages 186-203 are full process color.

Legal Items

The Renaissance Yearbook is a subsidiary of URI Student Senate. Both Renaissance and Student Senate are student run organizations and rely on student volunteers. No staff member receives profits obtained through sales, advertisements, or portraits associated with the publication of this book.
